Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Did General Meade Desire to Retreat, at the Battle of Gettysburg? I Did not see or hear of the letter of General Abner Doubleday, published in the New York Times of April 1st, until my attention was called to it. nearly a month afterward. But, in view of the fact of my previous silence, when General Doubleday has discussed the same topic, that does not account for my noticing it now or at all. I begin, therefore, with an apology for breaking that long silence, induced by the conviction that he had manifestly to the world failed to substantiate the assertions made in bis history of the battle of Gettysburg. I have been actuated, heretofore, by the belief that no man was ever written out of reputation but by himself, and the belief that I might safely commit that task to General Doubleday. But there comes a time when, in the individual case, it becomes a debatable question whether this view may not he pushed too far, when for instance, as at present, the living, as being alive, has to that extent a signal advantage over the dead. This I hold to be a good and sufficient reason for breaking a silence which has been maintained in deference to a general belief among friends, in which I no longer share, that it was simply not worth while to take notice of these attacks. They shall no longer have the benefit of the doubt of being harmless. If they be not harmless, it were well worth while to prove them groundless, which I proceed to do from undisputed facts, and from the enormously preponderating weight of...
