As story and character images coincide to the draw the focus and imagination of the reader, each story provides the reader with learning experiences that are magnified through Nana and her characters. The characters and story line are manifested from the imaginations and humorous stories shared between two lifelong friends about the behavior of their elderly mothers at family functions and social events. This laughable but sometimes bizarre adult behavior, shared between co-creators Richard Seta and Christopher Baudo, has been delicately intertwined into the story of the picture book so that each reader will unknowingly share in humor experienced by the creators. The relationship of the two main characters, Nana and the Scarlet Lady, parallel the relationship of the co-creators while real life humor helps to create small learning lessons of life for children. As the real life personalities of Nana and Scarlett Lady have allowed for the creation this picture book, the co-creators, a police officer and an architect, hope to provide each reader with a laughable experience.
