Toby Press Ltd, United Kingdom, 2003. Hardback. Book Condition: New. English.. 224 x 148 mm. Language: English, Hebrew . Brand New Book. When I was notified about his death, I told myself I m not going to his funeral. No way, I can t. Yet half an hour before the appointed time, I left home and went there. About thirty of forty people had gathered on the square in front of the funeral home. His son, his daughter, his brother and his family, a large group of Yiddish writers, several men and women apparently from his hometown. Many of them came to shake my hand, as if I were related to him or was his closest friend. As if it were my personal bereavement. While all this time, I felt a kind of heartburn, an inner burning, and could not utter a word. Nora s suicide is crying out inside of me, and time cannot silence that cry. I turned aside and leaned against the wall of the yard fearing that I might collapse. A kind of hushed commotion stirred up the little crowd of Yiddish writers, as if they were engaged in some clandestine affair, as if there were some last minute arrangements to be made before a trip in some pre-war railway station in Poland. Then a certain poet, whose name escapes me, mounted the podium before the coffin. He had sunken cheeks, a pointed thin-skinned nose, and protruding blue veins on his temples. He delivered a eulogy in Yiddish about the departing member of this united yet quarrelsome family whose ranks are gradually shrinking. He spoke heatedly, with an enthusiasm that sounded like anger; a loud cry suddenly burst out of his heart, half in Yiddish, half in Hebrew. Geshtorben? Neyn! Geharget! Yea, for Thy sake are we...
