For many years the condition of the Balkan Peninsula had been a serious menace to the peace of Europe, and since the Berlin Treaty in 1878 and the final rectification of the boundary line between Greece and Turkish territory there had been great discontent, especially in Greece. It was claimed that the intention of the treaty had not been carried out, and that part of Macedonia and Epirus should properly belong to Greece. There had been continual uprisings in Greece and raids for the purpose of regaining this territory. So-called patriotic societies, more or less secret, had been formed in Greece, from time to time, whose avowed object was to restore to the fatherland their claimed rightful territory, and a glance at the history of Greece will show how important a part they had played. At the time of the breaking out of the war the Ethnike Atairia was very powerful. This society had been formed by the union of the three so-called patriotic societies, The Charitable Brotherhood of Epirotes, The Macedonian Brotherhood, and The Hellenismos. It exercised a powerful influence on the government of Greece. Arms and equipments had been purchased and troops were organized and controlled by the society. Funds came in from every quarter of the globe, and preparations were both secretly and openly made for the war. At this time came the rising in Crete, the flight of the Christian refugees, and the excitement caused...
